

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

INTRODUCTORY NOTE.

The first edition of these notes was issued in August, 1894. A revised and more complete edition was printed February 15, 1896.

These notes are here again revised and brought down to date. There have been added various extracts from the Annuario Militar de España of 1898, which it was thought might be found useful at the present time.

SPAIN.

I. AREA AND POPULATION.

Spain has an area of 504,500 square kilometers, with an absolute population of 17,560,000, or 35 per square kilometer.

II. AVAILABLE STRENGTH.

According to the latest published statistics on hand the number of young men who, in the year 1894, attained the age of liability to military service was 141,061. There are, however, numerous causes of exclusion from the military service, among which are physical defects or disease, insufficient stature, membership in certain religious orders engaged in public instruction, labor in certain mines, penal sentences of various degrees, etc. Exemptions apply only to service in the active army, and are, for the most part, connected with the support of families. Exemption from active service is also purchasable, the amount to be paid varying from $300 to $400, depending on the time when the purchase money is paid.

Substitutions and changes of numbers are allowed, but only between brothers. Volunteers are also admitted to the army. Volunteers without bounty may enlist at any time, unless express orders are given to the contrary. Volunteers with a right to bounty are admitted to replace those men who have purchased their exemption, the bounty for the colonial troops being double that for the peninsular army. The time of enlistment for volunteers is four years, but men serving with the colors may volunteer to reenlist for one, two, three, or four years, the restriction being that they must not have passed the age of 45 at the expiration of the reenlistment.

There are no one-year volunteers in the sense in which that expression is understood in most of the continental services.

Of the available youths of the class of 1894 (40,500) about 0.23 per cent of the whole population, or 28 per cent of the class, were drawn for the active army. The remainder of the able-bodied youths of the class, those who have purchased their exemption and those who have furnished substitutes, together with the "condicionales"* and those who have been exempted from active service for family reasons, are posted to the "depósito," which corresponds nearly to the Ersatz Reserve.

The total strength of the rank and file of the army was fixed by law for the year 1894-95 at 82,000, and the strength for the year 1895-96 at 84,000, and for 1897-98 at 100,470. These figures do not include the "guardia civil" (gendarmery) or the colonial forces.

III. CONDITIONS OF SERVICE.

The recruiting law provides that military service is obligatory for all Spanish subjects during the period and between the ages determined by the law, and that no one who is able to bear arms will be excused from serving in the manner and category which the law and the regulations prescribe.

For the peninsular army the duration of this service is twelve years, reckoned from the day the recruits are enrolled in the recruit depots.

Neglecting the time that recruits are in these depots, the youths of each class must serve in one or more of the categories that follow: (1) Active army; (2) active reserve or furlough; (3) Ersatz-Reserve, including the "condicionales;" and (4) second reserve.

THE ACTIVE ARMY.

Recruits drawn for the active army pass three years with the colors, after which they pass to the active reserve, where they pass three years in the first battalion of the reserve regiment corresponding to their active regiment. They may be called out during this time for training, either with their regiments or not, as the minister may determine, and for such length of time as he may prescribe. At the end of these three years in the active reserve they pass to the second reserve, being enrolled in the second battalion of the reserve regiment, where they remain until the expiration of their twelve years. While serving in the second reserve they may be called out for training by ministerial order for not to exceed one month in each year.

THE ERSATZ RESERVE (DEPÓSITO).

Recruits who are posted to the "depósito" pass six years in it, being subject to an annual review, and to be called out for such training as may be prescribed by the minister. After the completion of these six years they pass to the second reserve, where they pass the remainder of their twelve years' service.

* The "condicionales" are those who are only temporarily excluded from service on account of temporary physical disability or stature very slightly below the minimum. These youths are subject to reexamination up to the end of the third year.

IV. MILITARY EXPENDITURE.

The war budget for 1897-98 amounted to $24,512,000.

V. THE COMMAND AND STAFF OF THE ARMY.

The constitution of the Spanish Monarchy vests the supreme command of the land and naval forces in the King, but, as in most of the other constitutional monarchies, the ministry is responsible for the royal acts, and the law specifically puts into the hands of the minister of war, who is always a general officer, the organization and government of the army and all the military services.

In the administration and direction of the army and the military services the minister is assisted by the war ministry and the various central dependencies. The latter are mostly independent of the war ministry, and are directly subordinate to the minister himself.

The war ministry consists of (a) a subsecretariat, presided over by a subsecretary, who is a lieutenant-general or major-general, and chief of staff of the war ministry, and (b) 12 sections presided over by generals of brigade, except the twelfth, which has at its head a divisional intendant.

Among the central dependencies are the direction-general of "Carabineros" (customs guard), the directions general of the guardia civil, and of some other corps that do not belong to the army proper, and the depósito de la guerra (war depot).

THE STAFFS OF THE ARMY.

The staffs of the Spanish army may be divided into (a) the general staff (estado mayor-general), (b) the staff corps (cuero de estado mayor), and (c) the aids-de-camp (ayudantes de campo and ayudantes de órdenes).

(a) The general staff.—The whole body of general officers of the army, excluding those who have only assimilated rank, is called the general staff. There are four grades—captain-general, lieutenant-general, general of division, and general of brigade.

(b) The staff corps.—The duties of the officers of the staff corps are to assist the general officers, under whose orders they are, in all matters relative to the organization of the troops and operations in the field. The grades in the staff corps run from brigadier-general down to captain.

The "depósito de la guerra" is under an officer of the general staff, assisted by a large number of staff officers and officers of the military administration corps.

In each army corps there is a chief of staff, of the grade of brigadier-general, belonging to or coming from the staff corps. The chief of staff is assisted by a number of field officers and officers of the staff.

10 NOTES AND TABLES ON THE SPANISH ARMY.

The officers of the staff corps are appointed from the graduates of the superior war school who have taken honors in the course and who have subsequently distinguished themselves in a course of practical work in one or more branches of the service. Both the war-school course and these practical courses last three years, after which the officers are admitted to the staff corps with the grade of captain.

To be admitted to the war school the candidate must be a lieutenant of infantry, cavalry, artillery, or engineers, must have held the grade of officer at least three years, and served at least one year with troops. His age must not exceed 29.

As the army list bears a number of lieutenants as belonging to the staff corps, it would appear that the lieutenants who are pursuing courses of practical work are attached to the corps with their old grades until they are finally admitted with the grade of captain.

(c) The aids-de-camp.—These officers are of the personal staffs of general officers, their number and grades depending on the rank of the generals in question. There appears to be no distinction between the “ayudantes de campo” and the “ayudantes de órdenes.” The latter are found only in the military household of the sovereign. These officers may be detailed from any arm of the service.

There is also a class of officers forming a separate body called the fortress staff (estado mayor de plazas). These officers are on duty as governors of certain places and fortresses, town mayors, and with various subordinate functions similar or connected with those just mentioned. Their grades run from colonel down to second lieutenant.

VI. ORGANIZATION.

(a) GENERAL.

The territory of the Peninsula is divided into 8 military regions, to each of which an army corps is assigned. The Balearic Isles and the Canary Isles form two captain-generalcies, each commanded by a lieutenant-general. The fortress of Ceuta, with its dependencies, and that of Melilla, with its own, and the camp of Gibraltar form three general commanderies, under generals of division, who are directly subordinate to the war minister.

The army corps and the military regions corresponding thereto are commanded by captain-generals or lieutenant-generals, who are styled general in chief or commander in chief of their respective corps, according to the grade they hold, and captain-general of the military region.

(b) THE ARMY CORPS—PEACE FOOTING.

The army corps is composed of one or two or three mixed divisions (divisions of all arms), and two corps have a cavalry division apiece. To the headquarters of each corps are attached a number of units, not depending on any of the divisions, such as cavalry brigades, rifle brigades, regiments of sappers and miners or other engineer troops, and battalions of fortress artillery. There are usually a few units stationed in each army corps region that do not belong to the corps.

(c) THE ARMY CORPS—WAR FOOTING.

On mobilization for war the composition of the army corps, it is supposed, will remain practically the same as in time of peace, except that the fortress artillery will no longer belong to the corps.

VII. THE DIVISION.

The divisions, of which there are 15 organized and 1 to be organized, consist in time of peace of 2 brigades of 2 regiments of infantry, 1 regiment of cavalry, 1 regiment of field artillery, 1 company of troops of the military administration, and 1 company of sanitary troops.

One division has, exceptionally, a whole brigade of cavalry.

A half brigade (2 battalions) of rifles may replace a regiment of infantry in the divisional organization, and 4 half brigades are so employed.

Six half brigades of rifles are organized into three independent brigades, which are attached in time of peace to 3 of the army corps.

On mobilization, the composition of the division remains unchanged.

VIII. THE INFANTRY.

(a) GENERAL.

The infantry of the permanent army of the Peninsula is organized into 112 regiments, of which 56 are active and 56 reserve, and 20 battalions of rifles grouped into 10 half brigades. Each active regiment of the line consists of 2 battalions of 4 companies each.

There are, in addition, 4 African infantry regiments of 2 battalions of 4 companies each, 2 infantry regiments in the Balearic Islands of 2 battalions of 4 companies, 2 rifle battalions in the Canaries, and 1 disciplinary battalion; in all, 147 active battalions. To these must be added four independent companies for service in peace establishments and in the Canaries.

(b) STRENGTH—PEACE FOOTING.

The regiment consists of 49 officers, including 2 surgeons, 1 chaplain, and the chief musician, and 776 men.*

* This is the strength since 1897 of the Second Battalion remaining in Spain. The First Battalion is "in operations" in Cuba, and will be considered later.

12 NOTES AND TABLES ON THE SPANISH ARMY.

The African regiment consists of 57 officers, 2 employees, and 1,204 men.

The regiment of the Balearic Islands consists of 49 officers, 2 employees, and 804 men, the regiment garrisoning matron having 196 extra men.

The rifle battalion consists of 26 officers, 1 employee, and 964 men.*

The rifle battalion of the Canaries consists of 26 officers, 1 employee, and 600 men.

The disciplinary battalion stationed at Melilla consists of 29 officers, 1 employee, and an indefinite number of men, estimated at 500.

(c) STRENGTH—WAR FOOTING.

The regiment consists of 45 officers, 2 employees, and 2,003 men.†

The battalion consists of 19 officers, 1 employee, and 1,001 men.

The rifle battalion consists of 26 officers, 1 employee, and 1,001 men.

The African and the Balearic Islands regiments remain unchanged.

IX. THE CAVALRY.

(a) GENERAL.

The cavalry of the Peninsular army is composed of 8 regiments of lancers, 14 regiments of chasseurs, 2 of hussars, and a squadron of the royal escort, each regiment consisting of 4 squadrons; in all, 113 squadrons. There are, in addition, 1 squadron of chasseurs in the Balearic Islands and another at Melilla.

The reserve regiments in the Peninsula number 14.

In time of peace 13 regiments are grouped into 6 brigades of 2 or 3 regiments each belonging to the various army corps. The First Corps has a division of cavalry of 2 brigades attached to it. The remaining 15 regiments are attached to the various army corps headquarters and to infantry divisions. In some of the corps these last-mentioned regiments are grouped into brigades of instruction. The cavalry troops are subordinate to the commanders of the units—division or army corps—to which they are attached, and where the divisional cavalry is united in brigades of instruction it is subordinate, for purposes of instruction, to the general commanding the cavalry brigade. There is no longer an inspector of the cavalry arm, that office having been abolished in 1893.

* These battalions have remained in Spain. The others, serving in Cuba, will be taken up later. The normal peace organization gives 358 men.

† The Reina Regiment No. 2 has 396 extra men.

NOTES AND TABLES ON THE SPANISH ARMY. 13

(b) STRENGTH—PEACE FOOTING.

Active regiment, 37 officers, 2 employees, 450 men, and 349 horses.

Squadron, 5 officers, 99 or 100 men, and 82 or 83 horses.

Cadre of a reserve regiment, 8 officers and 6 men.

(c) STRENGTH—WAR FOOTING.

Active regiment, 40 officers, 2 employees, 602 men, and 541 horses.

Squadron, 5 officers, 150 men, and 130 horses.

Reserve regiment, 39 officers, 602 men, and 540 horses.

X. THE FIELD ARTILLERY.

(a) GENERAL.

Except in the First Corps, where an artillery brigade is organized for instructional purposes, the field artillery is not organized into brigades in time of peace. The regiments are distributed with tolerable uniformity at the rate of 1 regiment to each mixed division, though in some cases the regiments assigned to certain divisions will be found to be detached and serving in the territory of another army corps. Each regiment has a staff and 4 batteries of 6 guns.

In time of war each regiment is to mobilize 2 divisions of 3 batteries of 6 guns each; also 3 ammunition columns.

The artillery is subordinate to the divisional and corps commanders to whose commands it is attached, and in addition is under the orders of the chief of artillery of the corps to which it belongs.

There are 13 regiments of field artillery (mounted regiments), 1 of horse, and 3 of mountain artillery.

Ten of the field regiments have 8 cm. guns, the remaining 3 9 cm. The horse artillery has the 8 cm. gun.

(c) STRENGTH—PEACE FOOTING.

The regiment of field artillery, 9 cm. material, consists of 29 officers, 11 employees, 366 men, and 228 horses and mules. Each battery has 4 officers, 90 or 91 men, and 53 horses or mules. Regiments equipped with the 8 cm. gun have 29 officers, 11 employees, 331 men, and 220 horses and mules. Each battery has 4 officers, 82 or 83 men, and 51 horses or mules. The regiment of horse artillery has 29 officers, 11 employees, 463 men, and 360 horses and mules. The regiment of mountain artillery has 29 officers, 9 employees, 455 men, and 148 horses and mules.

Mules are used for draft animals, except in the horse batteries.

14 NOTES AND TABLES ON THE SPANISH ARMY.

(d) WAR FOOTING.

The war footing is reached by expanding each regiment into two groups of three batteries each, with an ammunition column to each group, and one to the regiment.

XI. THE FORTRESS ARTILLERY.

(a) GENERAL.

The fortress artillery is organized into the same number of battalions and companies in time of peace and war, is distributed in the various commands according to the necessities of defense, and is subordinate to the same authorities as the field artillery. It consists of 11 battalions, the Eleventh being in Cuba, 3 of 6, 1 of 5, 5 of 4 companies each, and 1 of 3 companies, and a depot cadre company.

(b) STRENGTH—PEACE AND WAR FOOTING.

The 6-company battalions consist of 32 officers, 2 employees, and 610 men.

The 5-company battalions consist of 28 officers, 2 employees, and 534 men.

The 4-company battalions consist of 23 officers, 2 employees, and 430 men.

The 3-company battalions consist of 20 officers, 2 employees, and 374 men.

A mixed battery, so called, is attached to the 13th battalion, and has 5 officers, 3 employees, 147 men, and 75 horses and mules.

In the artillery arm are counted various depots, artificer companies, arsenals, gun foundries, small-arms factories, etc., etc.

XII. THE ENGINEER TROOPS.

(a) GENERAL.

In time of peace the engineer troops are grouped by regiments and battalions. There is 1 regiment with the First Corps, and 1 battalion with every other corps. There are, besides, other engineer battalions stationed in some of the corps regions without forming part of the corps. In the First Corps region, the corps regiment of sappers and miners, with the telegraph battalion and the railway battalion, which are stationed in the corps region, forms a brigade of engineer troops for instructional purposes, under a brigadier-general of engineers.

The engineer troops are subordinate to the commander of the corps and to the chief of engineers of the corps. There is no longer an inspector of the engineer arm, that office having been abolished in 1893.

NOTES AND TABLES ON THE SPANISH ARMY. 15

On mobilization for war, the engineer troops attached to corps remain with them.

There are 4 regiments of sappers and miners of 2 battalions, of 4 companies each; 1 regiment of pontoniers, of 4 companies; 1 battalion of telegraphists and 1 of railway troops, each of 4 companies; also 1 company of sappers and miners in the Balearic Islands, 1 at Melilla, 1 topographical brigade, 1 balloon company, and 1 company of workmen. There is a reserve depot for each regiment and independent battalion.

(b) STRENGTH—PEACE FOOTING.

The regiment of sappers and miners consists of 46 officers, 2 employees, and 802 men.*

The regiment of pontoniers has 28 officers, 7 employees, 500 men, 166 horses and mules, and 72 vehicles (4 companies).

The sapper battalion consists of 20 officers, 1 employee, and 400 men.

The battalion of telegraphists consists of 26 officers, 5 employees, and 547 men, and 75 horses and mules, and 18 vehicles. Three of the companies are "electrical," and the fourth is "optical."

The railway battalion consists of 24 officers, 1 employee, 500 men, and 32 vehicles. It has a section of velocipedists.

The balloon company has 3 officers and 53 men (no change on war footing).

(c) STRENGTH—WAR FOOTING.

Regiment of sappers and miners, 46 officers, 2 employees, and 2,006 men.

The pontonier battalion expands to 8 companies, and has 62 officers, 25 employees, 1,723 men, 1,189 horses and mules, and 153 vehicles.

Battalion of sappers, 20 officers, 1 employee, and 1,002 men.

Railway battalion, 29 officers, 1,057 men, 225 horses and mules, and 49 vehicles.

Telegraph battalion, 43 officers, 5 employees, 1,314 men, 744 horses and mules, and 164 vehicles.

The electrical telegraph companies have 6 officers and 348 men, and the optical company 7 officers and 378 men.

XIII. THE RAILWAY TROOPS.

(See Engineer Troops.)

* The third and fourth regiments have their first battalions in Cuba. The second battalion, in Spain, have at present what is substantially a war strength of 25 officers, 2 employees, and 802 men.

16 NOTES AND TABLES ON THE SPANISH ARMY.

XIV. THE TRAIN TROOPS.

In time of peace there are no organized train troops. On mobilization the train is raised by requisition of animals and vehicles, and forms sections in the administrative companies under the name of transportation brigades.

XV. THE PONTONIER TROOPS.

(See Engineer Troops.)

XVI. THE ADMINISTRATIVE CORPS.

The military administrative corps consists of officers and a brigade of administrative troops. The officers of the corps are divided into two sections, corresponding to their duties, although they form a single corps for promotion, etc. These two branches are the intendance section and the "intervención" section, the business of the latter being principally the control and audit of accounts, etc.

Under the intendance section come the direction and management of the services of subsistence, quarters, heating, lighting, transportation, clothing, equipage, etc., and the administration of all public property belonging to the military service.

Approving vouchers, etc., for payment is the business of the intendance; auditing such accounts is the business of the "intervención" section.

For the execution of the services of both corps there exists an office which forms part of the central administration and which is directly subordinate to the war minister. This office is called "la ordenación de pagos e intervención general de guerra," the branches of which are presided over by an army intendant and a divisional intendant, respectively.

There is an intendency in each corps region and military district, which appears to be combined with the "intervención." There are also such offices for the various military establishments and commissariat officers in the principal fortresses.

The grades in the military administrative corps run from army intendant down to official of the third class. They are assimilated to the grades of the military hierarchy, the grade of army intendant being assimilated to that of general of division, and that of official of the third class to that of second lieutenant.

Administrative troops.—The troops of the military administrative corps are organized into 2 brigades and 4 separate sections. Each brigade is composed of a staff, 8 companies, and 3 separate sections. These troops are officered from the military administrative corps, the brigades being commanded by subintendants, whose grade corresponds to that of a colonel.

NOTES AND TABLES ON THE SPANISH ARMY. 17

The companies are attached to the divisions of infantry or cavalry at the rate of one to each division; the separate sections of the brigades are attached to those brigades of rifles and of cavalry that are not incorporated in any of the divisions.

The sections and companies are classed as mountain units or mounted units. Their strengths vary very widely. Two companies have as high as 200 men each, and one has as low as 15. Some have as many as 5 officers and some have no officers at all.

The total strength of the military administrative troops, as given in the army list of 1897, was 28 officers, 2 employees, 1,500 men, 427 horses and mules, and 94 vehicles.

XVII. THE MEDICAL AND SANITARY SERVICES.

The Medical Corps of the Spanish Army (cuerpo de sanidad militar) is composed of a medical staff and the hospital troops.

The medical staff officers are divided into two sections, that of medicine and that of pharmacy; the first section being recruited from doctors of medicine and surgery and those medical graduates who have the lower degree of "licenciado," while the second section is recruited from the doctors and licentiates in pharmacy.

Admission to the lowest grade in each of these sections is by competitive examination; promotions from grade to grade are made by seniority.

The grades in the medical section of the corps run from surgeon inspector, first class, down to second surgeon, the highest grade being assimilated to that of general of division and the lowest to that of first lieutenant. The highest ranking apothecary, apothecary inspector, second class, is assimilated in rank to brigadier-general. The lowest grade is second apothecary, assimilated to first lieutenant.

There is a medical inspector for each army corps and a chief medical officer for each division.

The hospital troops.—These troops in the peninsula form the first brigade of sanitary troops. The units are companies and sections. Companies are attached to divisions of infantry and cavalry, and sections are attached to independent brigades. There are 16 companies and 4 independent sections in the island possessions and in Ceuta and Melilla.

The sanitary troops are officered by details from the medical staff, the commander of the peninsular brigade being a surgeon subinspector, first class, corresponding in rank to colonel. There is also another class of officers on duty with these troops—the hospital adjutants. These are men promoted from the sergeants of the sanitary troops. There are three grades of them, assimilated to captain and first and second lieutenants, respectively.

The troops of the sanitary brigade are also divided into the hospital troops proper (sección de practicantes y enfermeros) and the ambulance troops. Each of these forms a section by itself.

18 NOTES AND TABLES ON THE SPANISH ARMY.

The establishment of the sanitary troops, according to the Anuario of 1897, was, on a peace footing, 35 officers, 900 men, and 125 horses and mules. On a war footing, each company (peace footing) forms 1 divisional and 2 brigade field hospitals. The staff consists of 6 officers. The divisional ambulance has 104 men and 33 mules.

XVIII. THE VETERINARY SERVICE.

The officers of this department are attached to army corps as veterinary superintendents and to the various mounted units, remount depots, etc. They are appointed by competitive examination, candidates being limited to graduates of the veterinary school of Madrid.

The officers of this department have assimilated rank. Their grades run from veterinary subinspector, first class, corresponding to lieutenant-colonel, down to third veterinarian, corresponding to second lieutenant.

XIX. TOTAL STRENGTH—PEACE FOOTING.

The active army in 1897 consisted, in round numbers, of 100,000 men (exclusive of officers).

The guardia civil, the carabineros, and some volunteer corps paid out of the war budget, amount to about 30,000 men.

COLONIAL TROOPS.

GENERAL.

Financially the colonial troops are under the ministry of "affairs over the sea" (ultramar); in other respects, under the war and naval ministries, respectively.

Since the supplemental laws (July 19, 1889) made to the fundamental laws of the army, the colonial troops of Spain have been merged into one with those of the Peninsula. They remain, however, separated from it, inasmuch as they are permanently colonial.

The numbers of the regular formations are to be made continuous, following on from those of the army of the Peninsula.*

THE ARMY IN CUBA.

The regular forces operating in Cuba are of two classes: First, the permanent army of Cuba; and, second, the expeditionary forces.

* The last Spanish army list gives the organizations of ultramar the same numbers that they had before the reorganization of 1893.

DRESS AND DISTINCTION OF RANK IN THE SPANISH ARMY.

General (Captain-General).—Headdress: Helmet, with white plume. For field dress, the "Ros" with two broad gilt bands, or a cap similarly decorated.

Tunic.—Single breasted, of dark blue cloth, with red collar, facings, and cuffs, and with gilt epaulets for full dress. The collar is embroidered with gold, and the cuffs have embroidered on them the peculiar badge of a general officer, viz, small branches of laurel entwined with three batons. A captain-general wears three of these badges. The tunic for undress is similar, but with blue collar and cuffs. For field dress a plain tunic without facings or embroidery is worn.

Pantaloons.—White, worn with long patent-leather boots, for mounted duty when in full dress. For undress or field dress, pantaloons of madder red are worn.

Trousers.—Blue cloth, with gold stripe for dismounted duty when in full dress. For dismounted only in undress, or in the field, trousers of madder red, with a double blue stripe are worn.

Scarf (worn around the waist).—Crimson silk, with gold tassels and three gold rings.

Baton (carried by all generals and brigadiers, whether on mounted or dismounted duty).—Malacca cane, with gold top, and with a gold and crimson cord.

Gloves.—White buckskin.

Cloak.—Dark blue cloth, with red facings, having embroidered in gold on the shoulder cords a baton and sword crossed.

The dress of a lieutenant-general (teniente-general) is similar, but he only wears two of the gold badges mentioned above, and two gold rings on the scarf.

A major-general (mariscal de campo) similarly has one gold badge and one gold ring on the scarf.

A brigadier-general's (brigadier) uniform is exactly the same as that of a major-general, except that all the lace, badges, etc., are of silver, instead of gold.

Regimental officers wear a uniform similar to that of their men, with the following additions or variations:

Infantry and rifles.—When in full dress, officers wear gold cord on the “ros,” and those who belong to the regimental staff have white plumes instead of red. Officers’ tunics have gold shoulder cords, and when on duty a gorget of gilt metal is worn.

Cavalry.—Officers of lancers have feather plumes to their helmets instead of horsehair, and their ornaments are gilt. In the hussars the dolman is ornamented with gold cord, and in the Twentieth Hussars the scarf worn by the officers is of silk and gold.

Artillery.—The officers have gold cord on the upper part of the “ros” and gilt grenades on the collar of the tunic.

Engineers.—Officers doing regimental duty wear the “ros” like the men, but with silver ornaments and feather plumes. The regimental staff wear white plumes, the remainder red plumes. The officers of the director-general’s department, and those employed in the engineer academy and on engineer staff, wear the cocked hat.

The distinctions of rank for regimental officers are as follows:

Colonel (coronel).—On headdress three rows of gold lace, and on each cuff three bands of gold lace and three gold stars.

Lieutenant-colonel (teniente-coronel).—On headdress two rows of gold lace, and on each cuff two bands of gold lace and two gold stars.

Major (comandante).—On headdress one row of gold lace and one of silver lace, and on each cuff a band of gold lace and another of silver lace, with a gold and a silver star.

Captain (capitan).—On headdress three rows of narrow gold lace, and on each cuff three bands of narrow gold lace, with three gold stars above the cuff.

Lieutenant (teniente).—As for captain, but with two rows of gold lace and two gold stars above the cuff.

Second lieutenant (segundo teniente).—As for captain, but with one row of narrow gold lace and one of silver lace, with one gold and one silver star above the cuff.

NONCOMMISSIONED OFFICERS.

Regimental sergeant-major (sargento primero superior).—On each sleeve a single chevron of gold lace, spreading from the point of the shoulder at an angle of 60°.

First sergeant (sargento primero).—A triple gold stripe on each arm, sewed diagonally across the lower part of the sleeve.

Sergeant (sargento segundo).—Double gold stripes similarly worn.

Corporal (cabo primero).—Triple stripes of red worsted, similarly worn.

Second corporal (cabo segundo).—Double stripes of red worsted, similarly worn.

EXTRACTS FROM THE "ANUARIO MILITAR DE ESPAÑA," 1898.

The following pages are extracts from the Anuario Militar de España, 1898, and the Extracto de Organización Militar de España.

They contain the organization of the Spanish forces into divisions, brigades, and battalions, and the names of all officers serving with the various units. The list is not complete, but contains all information of that character which is available at the present time.

The stations given in the list are based on information dated about April 1, 1898. Since the beginning of hostilities it is presumed that the battalions, brigades, and divisions have all been collected at their various headquarters, and these would be the present stations.

TABLES SHOWING STRENGTH.

The figures in the following tables are taken from the "Annuario Militar de España, 1898," and are not accurate. They are greatly in excess of actual numbers. The strength of the battalions was originally 1,800, but losses in campaigns and by sickness have reduced all battalions to about one-half their original strength. The strength of a battalion of infantry at the present time has been variously estimated at from 700 to 900, officers and men. Advices from the eastern provinces as late as May 1 place the strength of the battalions in the vicinity of Holguín at from 900 to 1,050 officers and men, but the returns are not reliable and can not be depended on. It is presumed that the battalions of infantry in Cuba average from 750 to 800 men and officers; the squadrons of cavalry, 75; the batteries of artillery and the companies of special troops, about 100.

The tables have been reproduced here to afford bases for estimating the present strength. They, presumably, give the total numbers present, and allowance must be made for noneffectives.
